

New Farms for New Americans

C.S.A.

New Farms for New Americans (NFNA) is a social enterprise collective of immigrant and refugee farmers from Asia and Africa, coordinated by the Association of Africans Living in Vermont. NFNA growers sell produce to restaurants and grocers, at farmer's markets, and through our CSA. Farmers grow food by hand, with vast agricultural knowledge and experience, without pesticides and with a concern for sustainable practices. Learn more about NFNA on the AALV website: www.africansinvermont.org or on facebook: New Farms for New Americans, Vermont.

CSA or Community Supported Agriculture is a model of local agricultural sales. A CSA consists of a community of individuals who pledge support to a farmer by paying for a share of their farm at the beginning of the year. The consumers then share the risks and benefits of food production with the farmer. CSAs usually consist of a system of weekly delivery or pick-up of vegetables.

What we offer: Our CSA season is 16 weeks from July through October. The price is $400 for a family share. Shares include a bounty of seasonal vegetables and herbs, geared towards salad making and other commonly eaten vegetable dishes in the U.S. Most weeks NFNA farmers will also include prepared food items from their home cultures in the share. NFNA will offer special events with CSA members, where they will have a chance to learn more about our farm and farmers. We look forward to a relationship with you!

NFNA CSA Pick Up Site: Tuesdays: July-October. 12-1:30 at First Congregational Church or 4:30-6:00 at Old North End Farmers Market.
